Maximal Independent Sets in Networks

Aravind Srinivasan
University of Maryland, USA

The maximal independent set problem is a fundamental task of local leader-election in networks. The study of this problem has led to basic insights in distributed and parallel computing. We will survey some of the main lower/upper bounds and open problems, as well as recently-discovered biologically-inspired approaches.